COMMUNITY

Home to eclectic shopping, riverside dining, cultural attractions, and impressive art galleries, New Hope is a small town with big city charm. You can treat yourself to some retail therapy, shopping at the specialty stores all along Main Street, or you can spend an evening listening to haunted tales on a Ghost Tour – there's something for everybody. And the best part is, you don't have to go far from the River House to experience it all.

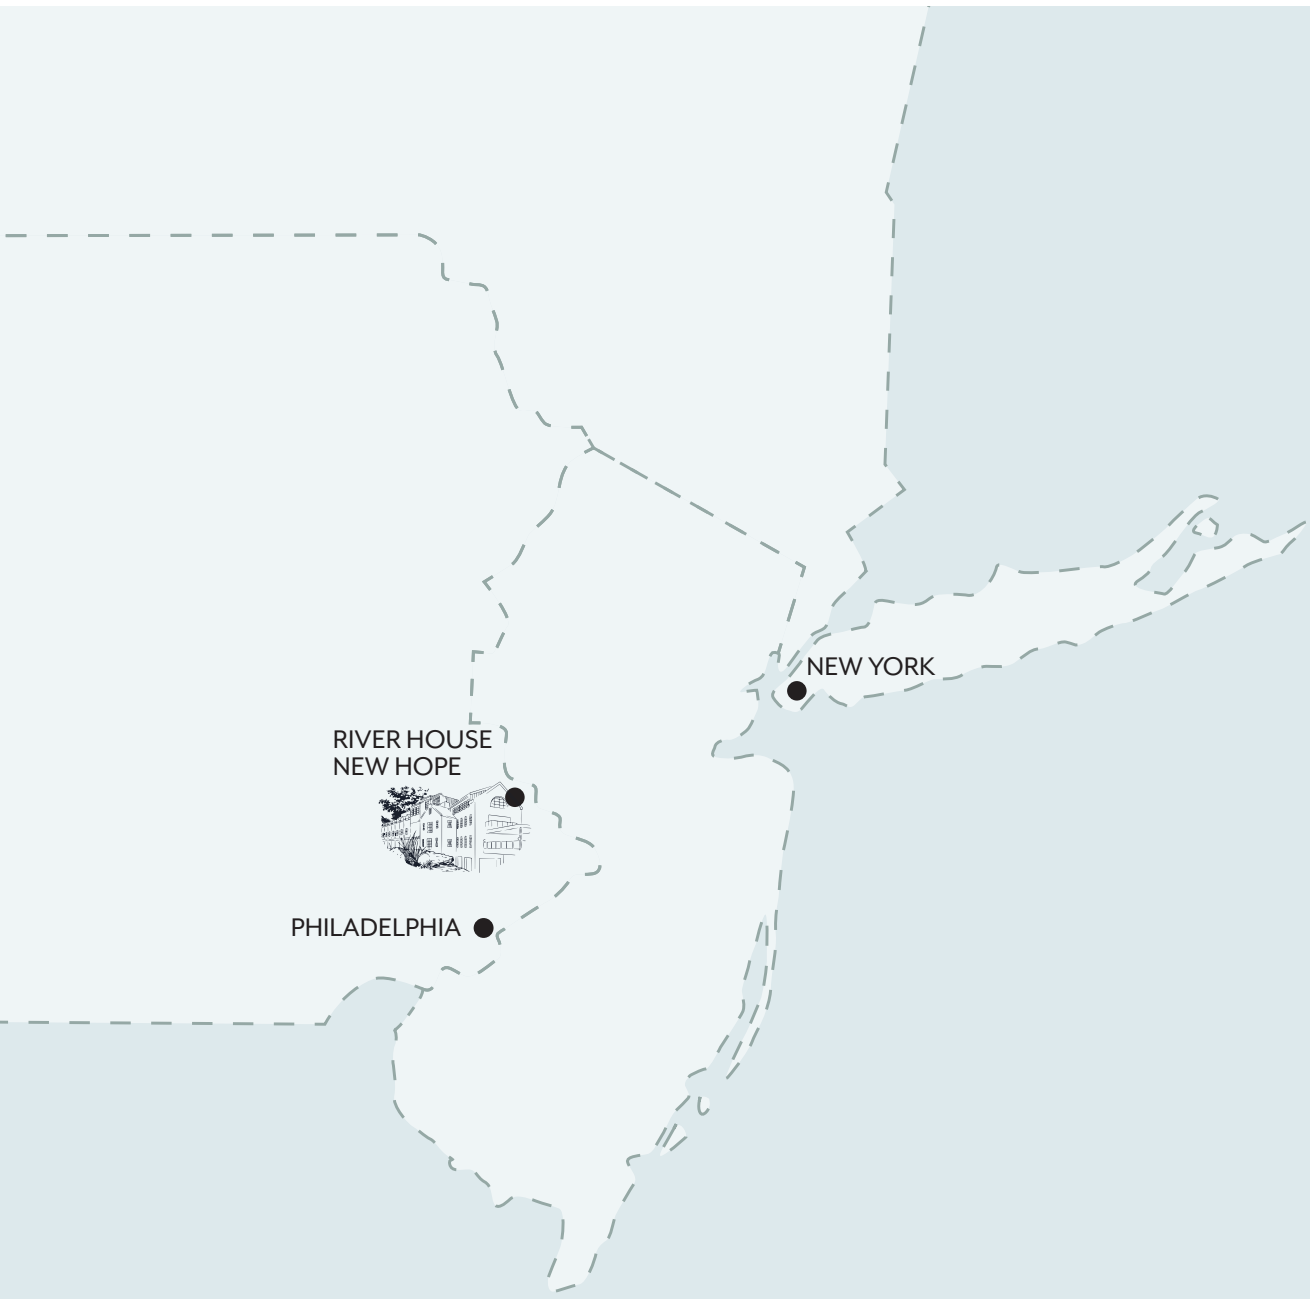

HISTORY

The original River House was built to serve boatmen on the Delaware River in 1794. When the Delaware Canal opened in 1830, the River House thrived as a landing spot for coal barges making their way to New York, but as the coal industry stagnated, so too did the flow of traffic through the doors, forcing the establishment to shutter its doors.

Nearly a century later, New Hope experienced a resurgence of tourism as elite artists and actors created a culturally driven community. Soon after, the site of the River House became the town's first hotel. Recognizing a need for elegant accommodations in the area, former screen star Odette Myrtil Logan purchased the hotel in 1961, renamed it Chez Odette, and transformed it into a landmark French bistro complete with live Parisian-style entertainment, including a cabaret and piano bar.

In 2018, this stone structure was moved to the center of town to make way for the River House at Odette's. Weaving the rich history of its predecessors and the unique culture of the surrounding community into this lively new incarnation, the River House can be enjoyed by generations to come.
